the animal ambulance using blue flashing lights. When used on private land, this is generally permissible, for example, at a racetrack with the permission of the organizer. However, the light should be covered when on the road. The transport of sick or injured animals does not fall under the definition of an ambulance for the purposes of lighting regulations. Sometimes the police allow the use of blue lights on the road accompanied by a police car, also showing blue flashing lights. Some animal ambulance companies have an understanding with the local police that they can show blue light (turned on or not) on their cars. It is recommended that the formal memorandum of understanding (MOV) be written and signed by both parties in order to reduce the likelihood of prosecution for improper coverage. In this case, the agreement will only apply to the local police force and not to any other part of the country.
